

Excelcia Music Publishing's Approach to Synchronization Rights

At Excelcia Music Publishing, we have not charged -- and will not charge -- for synchronization rights for performances that are free to your audiences. This is no accident. As an educator/composer-led company, we've been in your shoes and strive to meet the needs of educators, students, families and schools. We share this reminder because these times are challenging, directors have been reaching out and asking about whether we charge these fees, and, of course, the experience of making music has never been more important. We have immense pride for our composers and their commitment to keeping the music first during these challenging times. As educators, you should be able to perform their music for your concerts without extra hindrances. To all of the educators who have reached out to let us know you are performing works published by Excelcia Music Publishing, thank you. Now onwards to the music, playing and performing, safe and inspired.

